Biographical Note

Elmer Scott (1866-1954) was born in Jefferson County, Ohio on April 13, 1866. He attended Richwood College, Mount Union College, and Ohio Wesleyan University in Ohio, before traveling to Dallas for work in 1899. He left in the mid-1890s to work for Mr. Sears of Sears, Roebuck and Co. in Chicago, returning to Dallas in 1905 to oversee the opening of a new branch of the company's store. Scott retired from Sears, Roebuck and Co. in 1913, and established the first Department of Public Welfare for the City of Dallas in 1915. This early experience shaped Scott's later involvement with the Civic Federation of Dallas.¹

Created in 1917, the Civic Federation of Dallas grew out of an idea fostered by the Council of Social Agencies. The organization was also a reaction to World War I, as Elmer Scott and others believed the war would affect activities and the solidarity of social agencies in Dallas. The mission statement of the Civic Federation was to “create an organization for common, general service in behalf of social and civic progress and to function especially in the field of social education and research.” Joseph Cockrell served as the organization’s first president, and Scott served as executive secretary for the rest of his life. The Civic Federation hosted educational institutes, a weekly radio broadcast, art exhibits, movies, concerts, youth programs, and the Dallas Open Forum, and produced a number of surveys related to issues concerning the city of Dallas, as well as annual directories of local and state civic and social agencies. The organization worked in tandem with other civic and social agencies, such as the American Association for Adult Education, the Southwestern Political and Social Science Association, the Dallas Little Theatre, the Texas Committee for Inter-Racial Cooperation, and the Texas Social Welfare Association in pursuit of its goals (see more in the “Organizations” field below). The Civic Federation gave way to the Dallas Council on World Affairs in the 1950s, due to Elmer Scott’s death significantly impacting the ability of the organization to continue to function.²

Elmer Scott had several notable achievements during his time in Dallas. He received the first Linz Award for Outstanding Citizen of Dallas in 1924, an honorary LLD from SMU in 1948, and was one of the State Fair Pioneers honored by R. L. Thornton at the 1953 State Fair. Scott served as a president of the Southwestern Social Science Association and the Texas Social Welfare Association, as secretary for the Community Guidance Clinic, and as a board member for the Bradford Memorial Hospital and the Texas Society for Mental Health. Scott dedicated his life to advancing the causes of civic and social welfare, particularly in the area of adult education, and this is reflected through the activities of the Civic Federation. Elmer Scott died on April 20, 1954, shortly after completing his memoirs, 88 Eventful Years.³

Scope and Contents Note

The Elmer Scott Collection contains materials generated by Elmer Scott through his involvement in the Civic Federation of Dallas and in his personal life. The types of materials found within the collection include records (such as correspondence, minutes, reports, speech transcripts, memorandums, certificates, applications, and membership lists), financial documents (invoices, statements, budgets, and audits), printed materials (pamphlets, programs, bulletins, journals, booklets, directories, and newspaper clippings), scrapbooks, ledgers, books, periodicals, and visual materials (photographs).

There are ten series in the collection: Civic Federation, Other Organizations, Personal, Printed Materials, Miscellaneous, Manuscript Books, Library, Museum Objects, Periodicals, and Visuals. The first series, Civic Federation (1916-1955, Undated), is divided into three sub-series: General Records, Radio, and Youth Consultation Service.

The first sub-series, General Records (1916-1955, Undated), contains records (correspondence, minutes, memorandums, announcements, resolutions, reports, contracts, speech transcripts, certificates, and applications), financial documents (leases, budgets, statements), and printed materials (programs, pamphlets, journals, bulletins, directories, and newspaper clippings) that reflect the operations and activity of the Civic Federation of Dallas.

The second sub-series, Radio (1927-1948, Undated), primarily contains transcripts of radio broadcasts, related correspondence, documents, and scripts for plays that were used in these programs. Elmer Scott hosted the radio show on behalf of the Civic Federation.

The third sub-series, Youth Consultation Service (1934-1945, Undated), contains tests, evaluation sheets, correspondence, applications, reports, announcements, and other documents. These reflect the operations of the Civic Federation's Youth Consultation Service.

The second series, Other Organizations (1908-1954, Undated), contains records (correspondence, minutes, reports, announcements, statements, notices, memorandums, membership lists, rosters, resolutions, by-laws and constitutions, applications, and news releases), financial documents (invoices, audits, statements, and budgets), and printed materials (pamphlets, programs, bulletins, directories, newsletters, and newspaper clippings) for organizations other than the Civic Federation that either Elmer Scott or the Civic Federation worked with. The material is reflective of both the operations of these other organizations and the efforts of Elmer Scott and the Civic Federation in working with them.

The third series, Personal (1896-1955, Undated), contains records (correspondence, articles, reports, certificates, membership lists, burial information), financial and legal documents (account statements, title abstracts, notes, deed of trust, vendor's lien, warranty deed, agreements, leases), printed materials (pamphlets, programs, bulletins, manuscripts, and newspaper clippings) and Elmer Scott's passport. These materials reflect Elmer Scott's personal life and activity outside of the Civic Federation and other organizations he associated with.

The fourth series, Printed Materials (1921-1951, Undated), contains booklets, pamphlets, directories, and manuals. Some of these were produced directly by the Civic Federation of Dallas. Others relate to either the Civic Federation through their emphasis on social issues or the City of Dallas.

The fifth series, Miscellaneous (1918-1954, Undated), contains correspondence, documents, pamphlets, programs, bulletins, and newspaper clippings that relate to either Dallas or social work, and were kept in Elmer Scott's possession, although he is not involved.

The sixth series, Manuscript Books (1915-1953), contains scrapbooks, a guest book, a checkbook, and ledgers for the Civic Federation.

The seventh series, Library (1939-1954, Undated), contains an assortment of books, some of which cover topics related to social issues and adult education. Of note is the book, "88 Eventful Years," that outlines the history of the Civic Federation.

The eighth series, Museum Objects (1948), contains an academic hood related to the honorary L.L.D. conferred to Elmer Scott by Southern Methodist University in 1948.

The ninth series, Periodicals (1917-1952), contains a yearbook, an almanac, and bulletins (The Civic and Social Review, The Dallas Survey, The Skylark, and the Southwestern Musician).

The tenth series, Visual Materials (1912-1952, Undated), contains photographs, most of which relate to the activity of the Civic Federation.

This collection is particularly useful for those interested in how ideas of social and civic betterment were put to use in Dallas in the early-to-mid-20th century.
